THE WOOL TARIFF.

The president has been commanded, criticized and censured from all sources since he sent to the house a veto message on the proposed wool revision, the only measure which the Democrats attempted to pass over his veto.

In a recent issue of the Commercial Bulletin, an authority on such subjects, there appears an editorial under the caption "The President's Legal Stand on Wool" which is an clear presentation of the facts as has been made by any paper in the country.

In voting the wool revision bill President Taft has taken a step that is in entire accord with his purpose to throw his influence in favor of an honest revision of the Payne-Alderman tariff. That his act called for the exercise of a large measure of moral courage cannot be denied, for it can be clearly foreseen that Mr. Taft will be charged in a hundred different quarters with having sacrificed the will of the people as expressed in the last congressional election and with having trifled himself in standing guard over the only schedule which he himself characterized as indefensible. Nevertheless, the fact remains that the president has been a consistent advocate of tariff revision under the guidance of an expert and non-partisan tariff commission, and in view of the successful outcome of his efforts to have congress authorize such a commission he would indeed have been lacking in all merit if he had not signed any wool bill in advance of specific recommendations to that body.

How any reasonable mortal can take exception to any of the president's reasons for vetoing the bill almost passes comprehension. "The congressional proceedings," he says, "make available to me no accurate or scientifically accurate information which enables me to determine that the bill supplies the measure of protection promised in the platform on which I was elected." Does that not afford good and sufficient grounds for vetoing the measure? Would the president have more time to his credit or have been considered a safe enough candidate had he signed a measure containing whose substance he frankly concedes his ignorance?

That the president so far from being blind to the present situation is as strongly committed to their intelligent revision as he has been at any time in the past is attested by the following:

A. D. 1911, for the transaction and consideration of such business as may be deemed proper.

Each and every member of the committee is earnestly requested to attend in person. All persons throughout the territory, having the views of the republican party at heart, are invited to be present.

H. O. HEDGES,
Chairman.
Jesse E. SENA,
Secretary.

THE POSTAL SAVINGS BANK.

The success of the postal savings banks established in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Boston has induced the postmaster general to extend the system to other large cities.

In the first five days the deposits received at those four first-class cities was large enough to give promise of aggregate deposits of $7,000,000 a year and possibly more.

The postmaster general hopes to have the four large cities equipped with banks by the end of the year.

Practically all the 1800 second-class postoffices have now been given postal banks, and meanwhile the system is to be extended as soon as possible to the third-class and eventually to the fourth-class postoffices.

According to the morning paper there wasn't anything left of the Republican party except Gillenwater's disorganized little band.

What a walk-away for the Democrats.

Those committee members who were read out of the party by the pseudo chairman no doubt feel the disgrace deeply.

The Houston Post declares that

Jack Geraty is a Democrat anyhow, so it proposes to stand by him, even if he did stoop with an heiress.

Look at your tax receipts and see how the Gillenwater crowd have reduced your taxes.

The public breathlessly awaits the opening of the next "Opening Gun."

With another extra.

"Oh, to be a shark!" sighs the administration, supporting the arguments then made.

Individuals who have never made use of the ordinary saving system of the country have shown their confidence in the postal savings banks by being among the first to use them. It is said they are government-supervised institutions.

However, the effect upon residents of the United States coming from foreign lands, who have been accustomed to sending their savings abroad to be deposited in government-controlled institutions there, must await a further test. The hope is that in time they will trust their funds to the American postal banks with the same confidence they have shown in government institutions abroad.

Albuquerque now has a postal savings bank and its initiation indicates that it will be well patronized. The postal savings bank ought to bring all the money out that is now buried in the last congressional elections and with having trifled himself in standing guard over the only schedule which he himself characterized as indefensible. Nevertheless, the fact remains that the president has been a consistent advocate of tariff revision under the guidance of an expert and non-partisan tariff commission, and in
